The Hitchin Outer Orbital Path – HOOP allows you to explore the history of Hitchin and surrounding villages, travelling through beautiful Hertfordshire countryside and encompassing a wide range of wildlife habitats. The route is approximately 12 miles (19.3 km) and can be walked in several stages with bus connections on local roads to Hitchin Town Centre.

Hitchin. Old Market

Since Saxon times food markets have been held in the historic Old Market Square (A), and continue today; while the Arcade was originally the entrance for horse drawn coaches to the stables sited here. The Physic Garden and the Museum tell more of the local history and are worth a separate visit.

Oughtonhead Common (B), as the name suggests, is where the clear waters of the River Oughton rise from the chalk which forms the Chiltern Hills to the west. Sensitive management helps the river support a good variety of wildlife.

Oughtonhead Common was originally a medieval "cow common" where Hitchin "commoners" grazed their cattle. The land is prone to flooding and is of little use for agriculture or development. It is now a wetland Local Nature Reserve, owned by North Herts District Council and is grazed by native Longhorn cattle.

Cadwell Farm (C) is home to the well known 'Hitchin Lavender'. Lavender growing was at its height in the nineteenth century when a hundred acres were grown around the town of Hitchin, becoming renowned nationally. After centuries of being grown in the area lavender eventually stopped being farmed in the 1960's, beginning again in 2000 at Cadwell Farm.

The Icknield Way is known as the oldest road in Britain, with a history dating back to Neolithic times (4,000-2,000 BC). It winds its way across Hertfordshire on its way to Norfolk, passing by what is left of an Iron Age hillfort at Wilbury Hills (D). Archaeological excavations have revealed evidence of a gateway, buildings and storage pits, though there is little visible today.

Purwell Nine Springs Nature Reserve (E) managed by the Herts & Middlesex Wildlife Trust, supports a wide range of habitats and species. From open water to reedbeds, fen meadow to wet woodland this small site has a lot to offer. Kingfishers breed on the reserve and water voles frequent the ditches.

The hamlet of Charlton (F) is the birthplace of Henry Bessemer of iron smelting fame and the windmill was converted to a foundry at one time. The Windmill Pub now occupies the windmill's site. The River Hiz rises at Wellhead just outside the village.
